7. As well as delivering RADF training, Creating Links is a nationally recognised training provider delivering accredited Certificate level courses. We are delivering the LGA40104 Certificate IV in Local Government, covering topics such as facilitation skills, community engagement, policy, conflict resolution, inclusive learning, managing projects and finances and more, which has been well received by both council and community participants over the past 18 months. We are currently developing the CUA40311 Certificate IV in Community Culture which will have a strong underpinning of community cultural development processes and cover topics such as work to empower Aboriginal communities, support community participation, collaborate in creative processes, develop community networks, work with diverse groups, occupational health and safety, work on productions, manage projects, volunteers and finances; and co-ordinate marketing. We anticipate this course to be available from August 2012. A separate course also in development is our Certificate III level Foundation for Learning training. This course provides a stepping stone for participants who have not engaged with a learning environment for a long time or are participants from other cultures, who have a good understanding of the English language but require the confidence to undertake a course of study. The topics covered are: communication skills, leadership, language and literacy, computer and internet research skills, managing time; and coaching skills. We anticipate this course to be available from August 2012. Do you believe there would be enough local interest to deliver the following training in your region?
